Easter at the Churches

Easter Sunday was very fittingly observed by the Campbell churches at both morning and evening services. The day was an ideal one and everybody took occasion to don their new togs.

The morning service at the Methodist Episcopal church was given by the Sunday School, assisted by the church choir. The various classes assembled, led by a standard bearer. The members of the school deserve great praise for their performance which was greatly appreciated by a large audience. The church was very prettily decorated with the flowers that bloom so profusely at this season of the year. At the evening service Rev. Wilson gave the Easter sermon and the choir rendered the cantata "The Risen King."

Rev. Atkinson delivered the Easter sermon at the Congregational church and the choir rendered special Easter song services. At the close a baptismal service was held and the Lord's supper was observed. The church was decorated with calla lillies and ferns. The latter, which added so much to the beauty of the church, were gathered by the Searchlight Class that held a picnic in the mountains a few days before.

In the evening a special sermon was given for the Masons and their wives. The choir rendered special music. The services were attended by a large audience largely of Masonic families. The key note sounded was the present day need of real "men."

IN THE LAND OF COURTESY

Travel in Spain Made a Pleasure Despite Some Small Physical Discomforts.

When the moment for departure has arrived, the train announcer in a Spanish railway station chants, "Sen-o-o-res viajeros al tre-e-en!"—"Gentlemen travelers to the train!"—in a rhythmic phrase so weird, forlorn and musical that, as Mr. Harry Franck declares, it "sinks into the soul like a voice from the abysmal past."

But now as ever, the Spaniard is more polite than punctual, and the gentlemen travelers need not hurry. Their train will not. In one of the rare bits of travel by rail that diversified his "Four Months Afoot in Spain," Mr. Franck reached the station a minute or two after the platform gate was locked.

"The train I had hoped to take had, officially speaking, departed. A railway hanger-on in rags and hemp sandals, however, climbed the iron pickets and shouted a word to the engineer. Then, beckoning me to follow, he trotted back and rapped authoritatively on the closed window of the ticket office.

"'Senor,' he said, as the agent looked out, 'be kind enough to sell this caballero a ticket.'

"'The train is gone,' answered the agent.

"'Not, so, senor!' replied the bundle of rags, haughtily. 'I am having it held that this cavalier may take it.'

"'Ah, very well,' responded the official; and having sold me the ticket, he handed to the hanger-on the key of the platform gate. As I passed through it, the latter held out his hand, into which I dropped a copper.

"'Muchisimas gracias, caballero,' he said, bowing profoundly. 'And may your grace forever travel with God.'"

The third-class carriage, "a bare wooden cell of the size of a piano crate," was packed with ten persons, and with all the bags and chattels under which nine of them had been able to totter to the station. The heap, placed between the two plank benches, equaled a cartload, and was crowned by a crate of cackling hens.

Yet despite undeniable physical discomforts, the delightful manners of the peasant travelers made the journey agreeable. The talk was general and merry; nine times he was invited to share a fellow traveler's lunch; each passenger dropped at a way station departed with the benedictions of his fellow-travelers.—Youth's Companion.

Walnut for Gunstocks.

A number of attempts have been made by gun manufacturers to obtain walnut from the United States for gunstocks, but the wood has invariably been found unsuitabte for the high class guns, and it has not heretofore been used for guns of poor quality. The difficulty is not in the strength of the wood, but in the color, which is dark brown, with none of the yellow and light brown streaks that are found so attractive for gunstocks. The walnut that has been used for British gunstocks has come from Italy, Switzerland and France. It is said, however, that the last tree suitable for gunstocks in Italy has apparently been cut, so that the supply is now French, but the prices for the French walnut are going up so high that they may within a few years become prohibitive. The French walnut is now particularly in demand for veneering purposes, it being found more profitable, as a rule, to cut it for veneer than to sell it for gunstocks. Thus it is quite likely that a situation will develop where American walnut gunstocks will be in demand.

How Diviners Are Guided.

Frau Tukory, the wife of a well-to-do Hungarian land owner, who is said to have a special talent for discovering minerals with a divining rod, describes in a Budapest newspaper the different sensations which she experiences.

When searching for a lost vein of silver near a mine in Germany belonging to Professor Pfahl, of Bonn university, she says she felt violent twitchings in her right arm. This was a sign to her to turn to the right, and a few yards further on shooting pains in her arms and breathlessness told her that she was above the spot. The vein was found the next day near the surface.

On the other hand, when she discovered petroleum in Hanover she had a feeling as if her head were being bound tightly with a cloth. Frau Tukory first made a name as a diviner by discovering coal on M. Jan Kubelik's estate in Bohemia.—Vienna Correspondence London Standard.

World-Famous Institution.

Lloyd's recently celebrated its centenary in London, but this does not mean that this great organization for collecting maritime intelligence is but a hundred years old. Its agencies through which every coast in the world is jealously watched were established in November, 1811, but Lloyd's goes back to the seventeenth century when underwriters used to meet at Edward Lloyd's coffee-house, in Tower street, to transact business and exchange information. In 1774 the institution was moved to the Royal Exchange, where it has since remained.

His Last Investment

By MICHAEL J. PORTER

When George Graham Colville, at the age of twenty-five, was left a legacy of half a million dollars by an uncle, his friends said of the lucky man:

"George is all right. He won't risk a dollar of that money in speculation. He is a young man with a wise old head on him."

Young Mr. Colville had been living for several years on an income from that uncle. He had lived quietly and conservatively. He was a man of leisure, so to say, but not a spendthrift. He kept out of debt, did not permit his tailor to rob him, and his tips to chauffeurs and waiters were on a ten per cent. basis. He was just the man to invest half a million dollars in real estate and wait years to see it double in value. When it was known that the money had been deposited with a trust company to await a safe investment, all the gray-haired men in the club congratulated the young man again.

The man who argues that he or any other man can suddenly receive a great sum of money without making any change in him is wrong. It is money that makes most of human nature what it is. In this case it did not compel Mr. Colville to seek a more aristocratic quarter to live in—his tips did not increase—he did not seek to cut a dash in any direction. He continued to be a quiet, reserved young man, apparently entirely satisfied with the world at large. And that was where he received his friends.

In the first place, for a long time previous to getting his money, young Colville had felt sure that if he had some spare capital he could become a millionaire by speculation. In the next, now that he had it, he was looking around for good things. He was doing it very quietly and saying nothing. If he found a good thing he would gobble it and let other folks take care of themselves. He heard it whispered one day that wheat was going to jump 20 cents a bushel, owing to the wars in Europe. He invested $20,000 and wheat took a sudden drop of 15 cents.

Mr. Colville was somewhat astonished that things had not come out as he had figured they would, but not at all discouraged. He took a flyer in cotton, and his investment flew away with him. It wasn't that he was wrong in his figuring, but that everybody else was wrong. The M. & M. Irrigation company came under his notice. No, they didn't advertise in the papers, and they didn't send him the circular that insured investors 100 per cent. profit. In a restaurant one evening he heard one man whisper it to another. He found the headquarters of the company after quite a search and invested $15,000. Six weeks later the federal authorities had the swindlers in limbo.

There were other things the quiet and conservative young man went into to his financial loss, and in the course of a year he dropped a fifth of his fortune. In each and every case his acumen and logic were right. He would have made instead of lost if so and so hadn't stepped in. No, it was no fault of his. The wisest brokers and bankers had been caught. He had lost $100,000, but he knew a way to get it all back and as much more with it. Quietly—very quietly—a company of capitalists had brought up a big tract of land in the west through which a river ran. It was a golden river. Its bed was paved by nuggets. When the waters had been turned aside those nuggets could be shoveled into empty sugar barrels. Dividends? One thousand per cent. at the very least, and then there would be a sinking fund left to buy a mountain of radium somewhere.

The information reached Mr. Colville like a whisper. He didn't know where the headquarters of the company was within five miles, and he found himself very nervous for fear the entire stock would be taken before he could offer his money.

At 1 o'clock on a certain Saturday afternoon, as Mr. Colville sat in the parlor of his bachelor apartments, his valet announced:

"A young woman to see you, sir, and she won't give her name."

"Why won't she?" was asked.

"Dunno, sir. Women are queer creatures."

"You said that I was busy, did you?"

"The busiest day you have had for ten years, sir."

"But she wouldn't go away?"

"No, sir."

"Is she wild-eyed and excited?"

"No, sir. I should say she was calm as a lake. I mean a small lake sheltered by trees."

"You asked her to state her business?"

"I did, and she said it was none of my business."

"Well, you may admit her."

The caller was a girl of twenty, and Mr. Colville at once recognized her as a stenographer he had seen in the office of the Honduras Banana company on one of his calls. Her attitude was timid, and there was a bit of tremble to her voice as she said:

"I know you to be a bachelor, and that this is unconventional, but—"

"She has lost her place and wants me to help her to another," said Mr. Colville to himself.

"But there are a few things I felt it my duty to tell you."

Mr. Colville bowed.

"I happen to know that you have been made a victim in several swindles, and that a grand coup is now making ready against you."

Mr. Colville stiffened. He had lost money, but he had kept the matter secret. He had a dim suspicion that he had been duped, but he didn't want that suspicion confirmed. He wanted to keep right on thinking he was a financier.

"Every dollar you put into that golden river scheme you will lose. As a stockholder you may be indicted with others for swindling."

"Miss—er—Miss, this is very strange talk," said the financier.

"Miss Bird, sir. Yes, rather strange, but I realized that you were being played for a hayseed."

Mr. Colville's face went as red as paint.

"I can tell you of eight different swindles that have been worked against you. These things come to the knowledge of stenographers, and sometimes they get a rake-off. My per cent. of the swindles on you have amounted to $500."

Mr. Colville turned pale this time and sat staring at the girl as she went on:

"You can go to the tailor and order a suit of clothes, but beyond that you are no financier. You haven't been as sharp as the average Uncle Rube."

"Young woman—Miss Bird—!"

"You never even asked in what state that irrigation ditch was to be dug! They would have been too glad to sell you stock at 15 cents, but you offered 60 and paid 70!"

Mr. Colville blinked and hitched around.

"That ice business. They couldn't even get a farmer, a preacher or a widow in on that. I believe you are the only flat they got!"

More blinking and wriggling.

"Before you took that flyer in wheat had you heard that the Euro-

The Caller Was a Girl of Twenty.

pean crop was the best for years, and that our speculators were looking for a drop, instead of a rise?"

Mr. Colville opened his mouth, but shut it again before a word had slipped out.

"Not satisfied with trimming you for a good round sum," continued Miss Bird, "the swindlers are going to make a killing this time. They want every dollar you've got."

"This is—is queer talk, Miss Bird," said Mr. Colville after a gasp.

"But it's straight talk."

"But why should you—you—"

"Why should I come here to tell you these things? Because I think you need a guardian!"

Mr. Colville looked at her in a puzzled way.

"And you can't get one too soon!"

With that she was gone. It was half an hour later, and after some heavy thinking, that the financier called to his valet:

"O, Thomas, have you ever had reason to think me an irresponsible person?"

"I—I shouldn't like to say, sir."

"Well, do you think I'd be better off with a wife?"

"Certainly, sir."

"A wife like the young woman that just left?"

"Just like her, sir."

"Um! Thomas, I think you are right. I shall ask for her hand within a month. I think she'll be a good investment at par!"

Italians and Crime.

Il Giornale Italiano prints a list of murders perpetrated in this city up to Jan. 31 last in which "not a single Italian name appears." True, some of the murderers and their nationality are as yet unknown, but it is unnecessary to assume that they were Italians. Murderers are produced by every nationality. Because of inadequate policing of the vast Italian colony in this city, most of whose members are thrifty and law-abiding, crimes of guilt and violence have multiplied within its confines. The fact that criminals are closely watched in Italy, but can easily escape to the United States, where they may prey with impunity upon their honest countrymen, makes the situation the more deplorable.—New York Tribune.

No Chance.

"Mrs. Brown's husband tells his wife everything."

"Maybe she makes it easy for him. You won't give me a chance to get a word in edgewise."

WARD OF GOVERNMENT

LONG AND ARDUOUS SERVICE OF MULE RECOGNIZED.

It Has Been Said That Republics Were Ever Ungrateful, but This Incident Seems to Disprove the Statement.

Almost thirty years ago, so the archives of the war department disclose, Lieutenant W. A. Kobbe of the Third artillery, who was stationed at Mount Vernon barracks, Alabama, reported to the war department that there was at that post a white mule named Mexique, which had been for many years in the service of the United States, but which had at last been ordered sold. The officers of the post, Lieutenant Kobbe said, desired permission to purchase the animal and keep and care for it at their own expense.

Major F. L. Guenther of the Second artillery, to whom the petition was referred, reported that the mule in question was originally left at Key West barracks in 1848 by a portion of the army returning from Mexico at the close of the war with that country. He added:

"During the time that I served at Key West, from 1875 to 1880, the mule did not miss a day's work from any cause. He is very old and has been worn out by his long service in the quartermaster's department. If there is any way to provide for him, I should be glad to have it done, as the expense to the government would be little or nothing."

The petition went through the regular channels until it reached the quartermaster general, who indorsed it as follows:

"To promote the sentiment of kindness toward animals that are so intimately connected with military men, it is recommended in this special case that this mule be kept in the department and left to the care of those whose kindly feelings are so deeply enlisted in his behalf."

General Sherman submitted the case to the secretary of war, with the following report:

"I have seen the mule, and whether true or not, the soldiers believe it was left at Big Spring, where Mount Vernon barracks now are, at the time General Jackson's army encamped there, about 1819-1820. Tradition says that it was once a sorrel, but now it is white from age. The quartermaster's department will be chargeable with ingratitude if the mule is sold, or the care of maintenance of it thrown on the charitable officers of the post. I advise that it be kept in the department, fed and maintained until death. I think the mule was at Fort Morgan, Mobile Point, when I was there in 1842."

The secretary of war thereupon made the following order:

"Let this mule be kept and well cared for as long as he lives."

Scorpion's Fainting Fit.

The scorpion that is placed in the center of a ring of coals does not commit suicide by stinging himself to death, as has been claimed. In lands where the scorpion abounds it is a regular pastime among countrymen to ring a scorpion with fire and watch him commit, as is believed, the happy despatch. Nevertheless, the scorpion has the last laugh, as it were.

The scorpion, though an inhabitant of torrid regions, is so delicately organized that a very slight increase above the normal temperature produces a condition in him analogous to a fainting fit. Driven desperate by the heat, he lashes his tail wildly, giving the impression that he is plunging his sting into his own body. Then he falls motionless. As a presumably dead scorpion has no further interest for the spectators, he is usually left where he has fallen, and, after the fire has died down, he recovers and crawls away.

Peacock Throne of Persia.

The throne, itself, which now graces the audience hall of the Persian Shahan-Shah, or "King of Kings," is a magnificent work of art, sumptuous in the extreme. It is a jeweled platform, sometimes compared to a "field bed," about four feet high and five feet by eight feet in area, resting on six massive legs, with four additional supports, and mounted by a double step. A heavy railing, decorated with metal knobs and finials, emboxes the rug-bedecked seat, and rises at the rear to form an elevated back, against which the shah sits in Oriental fashion, supported by a bolster-cushion and surrounded by pillows. The rich incrustations of jewels, the highly ornate character of the lacquer work, and the delicacy of the traceries and arabesque designs impart to the throne an exquisiteness of finish and beauty that is quite its own.—From Constantinople to Persia, by A. V. W. Jackson.

Unflattering.

"Philbrick, I never have the slightest trouble in remembering your name. I think of 'jackpot' and I've got you at once."

"What's the connection?"

"Well, jackpot suggests bathroom; bathroom reminds me of bath brick, and from bath brick to Philbrick the transition is easy."

Life Not All Gone Yet.

"I suppose you've been begging all your life, haven't you?" said the lady to the tramp at the back door.

"Not yit," was the wanderer's reply.

PROMINENT PEOPLE

MADERO'S DIFFICULT TASK

Recent revolutionary outbreak in the Republic of Mexico, has again brought into the limelight Francisco Madero, and there is some speculation in certain quarters regarding the president's ability to handle the situation. Madero is the strangest world-figure alive today. He is a brave but not a brilliant soldier. He is a quiet, modest gentleman and scholar, too nearly a dreamer and a doctrinaire in patriotism for the thought of despotic rule or undeserved injury to any man ever to enter his mind. Gold lace and medals for himself he despises almost as heartily as he does graft and selfish greed. There is not a trace of the glitter that the Latin-American temperament loves about the man now so well beloved, whose pen picture we quote from Hampton's Magazine:

The Madero properties in Mexico are larger than several small American states combined, and the elder Madero is said to be worth $20,000,000.

Francisco Madero is about forty-two years old, is married and the father of a numerous family. He is tall, broad-shouldered, somewhat inclined to stoutness. His head is well shaped, forehead finely developed, eyes far apart. His countenance is pale from a somewhat studious and indoor life, and he does not possess anything like the physical prowess of Diaz.

At one time Madero was minister to Russia under Diaz. He held several other important posts in the government. He was educated in Paris and is a man of refinement and culture. He is a linguist and a diplomat.

COLONY TO AID CITY'S POOR

Two thousand acres near Kutman, Ind., will be devoted to the Warren Springer colonization scheme for poor Chicago families with many children, according to the statement of Mrs. Margaret Springer, widow of the millionaire real estate man.

The colony wil be laid out as Oscar Lovell. Triggs, formerly of the University of Chicago and now a member of Katherine Tingley's Theosophist colony at Point Loma, Cal., devised with Mr. Springer years ago.

"In the city a family of ten children are liabilities, in the country they are assets," said Mrs. Springer, leaning back in her chair with Russian furs draped over her left shoulder. "'Daddy' Springer's idea was to boost the poor who lead such miserable lives in the congested parts of the city, not to lay down the law to them as to how they must act.

"I mentioned Oscar Lovell Triggs because it was his idea in the first place as far back as 1898. To say the colony will be like Mrs. Tingley's center at Point Loma is a mistake. There will be no religious element, and in fact no element but the economic.

When asked if she intended being a twentieth century Margaret Fuller on the new Brook Farm, Mrs. Springer replied:

"No. I shall stay here in my husband's office from early in the morning till late at night until his affairs are settled.

DIRECTOR OF RURAL SCHOOLS

A new division of experts in educational work will be organized shortly by the United States Bureau of Education to look after the needs of the rural schools of the country. This is the latest plan of Uncle Sam to [illegible] proper education of the coming generation in rural communities. In addition to the 10 or more specialists in rural education, there will be a number of experts engaged to assist in the handling of problems relative to city schools. These will include specialists for trade schools, agricultural education below the college, education in home-making, commercial education and for normal schools and the training of teachers. In the division there will also be specialists in city school administration, in school sanitation and hygiene, and one or two in secondary education, with a director of research.

The plan will include a personal visit of representatives of the bureau to every rural school in the United States. The main object is to improve the surroundings of the pupils and to aid in securing proper school houses. Dr. A. C. Monahan is to have direct charge of the new rural school work. "Our first step," he says, "will be to make a survey of the field so that we may know definitely conditions of the rural schools as they now exist.

"We have in the United States right now about 506,000 public school teachers, while about 125,000 new teachers are required every year.

HEAD OF A BIG POSTOFFICE

Simply because Mrs. Gustave A. Root—no relation to the senior senator from New York—postmaster of the mining town of Tuttle, Col., recently took it upon herself to order a couple of men from her office at the point of a six-shooter one must not infer that she is the only woman postmaster (not postmistress) in the county Tuttle is a fourth-class office.

There are 53 women postmasters at first and second class offices, and nearly 200 of all classes, many of them of long terms, extending over two or more administrations.

The highest paid woman postmaster is Miss Alice M. Robertson at Musgokee, Okla. Miss Robertson has had a rather notable career and is known to every postmaster who has attended any of the conventions of presidential postmasters during the past few years. Miss Robertson is a native of Oklahoma and is now in her fifty-seventh year. Her parents were missionaries among the Indians of Indian territory, and she was born at one of these missions. Miss Robertson has seen practically nothing but Indians ever since. She served as a clerk in the Indian office from 1873 to 1879. From there she went as a teacher to the Carlisle Indian school. Afterward she was appointed disbursing agent for the Creek Indian schools in Oklahoma. Her mother translated the Bible into the Creek Indian tongue.

Spring Medicine

There is no other season when medicine is so much needed as in the spring. The blood is impure and impoverished—a condition indicated by pimples, boils and other eruptions on the face and body, by deficient vitality, loss of appetite, lack of strength.

The best spring medicine, according to the experience and testimony of thousands annually, is

Hood's Sarsaparilla

It purifies and enriches the blood, cures eruptions, builds up the system.

Get it today in usual liquid form or chocolated tablets known as Sarsatabs.

Great Drawback.

"I do hope the people who are trying to make flying possible will never succeed." "Why? It seems to me it would be a great thing for the human race." "It might be, but the costumes people have to wear to go aeroplaning are so hideous."

Though the past is irrevocable, it is not irreparable.—F. B. Meyer.

Evil of Modern Life.

There is justification for the unrest of today, for multitudes of people spend their time in making a living and never having time to live.

SPURNS FILTHY LUCRE

ONE MAN FOUND WHO DOES NOT CARE FOR MONEY.

Lure of Comfortable Home, With Greenbacks in Profusion, Unable to Decoy Joseph Flusser From the Life He Loves.

If you were shoveling coal and getting no pay for it and sleeping nights under a wharf and getting such meager bits of food as just happened to fall your way and your brother should come along and discover you after a long, long search and take you by the hand and tell you that he had $2,000 for you and a good home and plenty to eat, would you run away? Then, if running away, that brother should ask the judge to declare that you were crazy, wouldn't your brother have good ground for his move?

That's the situation presented in the singular case of Benjamin Flusser, who keeps a furniture store at 214 Springfield avenue, one of the main business streets of Newark, N. J., who has asked the court to look into the state of mind of his brother, Joseph, who has been sent to the detention ward of Bellevue hospital, New York, because he runs away from money which almost any man will chase for miles and lose his breath over and cheat and lie and scheme and sell gold bricks for. Benjamin had been looking for Joseph since their father died on November 25 last leaving an estate of $14,000, of which $2,000 was Joseph's share. Benjamin was walking along Grand street, New York, when he ran across Joseph busy shoveling coal into a cellar from a sidewalk.

When Benjamin told him what had happened, Joseph said: "I don't want anybody's money; I hate money; give it away and please go away and let me work. I know I am your brother, but I do not want money. I am working; so go away and let me finish my job."

"My brother cannot be in his right senses," says Benjamin. "He will not sleep in a home and has a place under the Williamsburg bridge. He hates to be in a home and won't work in a store. I want to give him a good home, and I could get him a good job, but he will stay with nobody. He runs after wood and coal carts until they are ready to be unloaded and then he helps.

"Sometimes they give him ten cents, sometimes 15 and maybe a quarter. They say he will not take a quarter, saying he does not want any one's money, while lots of times he works and then goes away without looking for any money or waiting for it."

The money-hating brother is forty-four years old and came from Austria. Before leaving Europe he was one day leaning over a bridge watching bathers below, when the rail against which he leaned snapped and he fell on his head many feet below, striking a pile of lumber. After that he was semi-conscious for six months, and did not recover his mental or physical strength for a year. That was 28 years ago.

With two of his six brothers, Benjamin and Max, the eccentric one came to Newark. He worked with his brothers for a while, left them and worked in Salomon's tannery for four or five years. This was the longest he had ever stayed in one place, and he had saved up several hundred dollars.

The Chicago World's Fair then was advertised and Joseph went to the fair. He lost all his money and became lost to his brothers. They looked for him in Chicago, traced him to various parts, and finally found that he was in New York. From time to time they were told that he had been seen over there, and they went to look for him, but without success.

Max Flusser, a broker, died in Newark, November 25, leaving $14,000, of which $10,000 was in cash and $4,000 in second mortgages. Benjamin Flusser is the administrator of the estate, and, as he says $2,000 is Joseph's share, he wants to protect his brother and put him in some home or institution where he will be cared for. This is the $2,000 that Joseph spurns.

Saw His Opportunity.

"I told him there were dozens of people right here in town who had never heard of him." "I guess that took him down a peg or two." "I guess it didn't. He started right out to find them and borrow money."—Houston Post.

WATER SUPPLY QUITE NOVEL

Pennsylvania Farmer Saves Rain Falling on Nearby Church by Means of a Large Reservoir.

On the farm of W. H. Farquahr, in Washington county, Pa., water is supplied for laundry, kitchen and bathroom in a cheap and novel manner, says the Agriculturist. About sixty rods from the farmhouse is the village church, standing about 100 feet higher than the dwelling. Mr. Farquahr conceived the idea of conducting the rain water from the roof of the church into a large reservoir which he constructed in the field nearby. From there the water is piped under gravity pressure to his house, thus affording a bountiful supply for the purposes named. All the church trustees require is that the conductor pipes on the church be kept in good repair.

Water from a spring is piped to the barn for the stock, and at a nearby spring water for cooking is gotten, and here is located a milkroom where the output of a well-kept dairy herd is cooled before it is put on the market. Mr. Farquahr has built a very practical barn and demonstrates that he can grow crops to fill it, as he has a fine mow of well-made clover hay. Some nice poultry is kept, and best of all, a contented, happy family in the pink of health.

Poverty.

Poverty is dishonorable not in itself, but when it is a proof of laziness, intemperance, luxury and carelessness; whereas in a person that is temperate, industrious, just and valiant, and who uses all his virtues for the public good, it shows a great and lofty mind. For he has no time for great matters who concerns himself with petty ones; nor can he relieve many needs of others, who himself has many needs of his own.—Plutarch.

Value of Tank Heaters.

A tank heater rightly used is a money-saver on the farm, says the New England Farmer. First, if water is taken into the animal's body icy cold it must be warmed by heat from that animal's body. Be that animal cow, horse, hog or sheep, it can make heat only from the food it has eaten or from its own stored-up flesh. Both those sources of heat are expensive. Is it not cheaper to warm the water with firewood or with corn cobs or waste trash about the yards than it is to do so with high-priced grains or hay?

Moderately warm water is more healthful to the animal. Ice water chills the system and retards digestion. The stock will not drink a sufficient quantity if it is icy. The vital process will not be carried on properly. Farmers who have used tank heaters for years would no more do without them than they would refrain from supplying water. Tests have shown that the tank heater is an economical addition to the equipment of any farm. It can be bought cheaply. It requires but little attention. It is safe. It saves feed.

Time Told by Shadows.

Among curious clock novelties is the shadow boudoir clock. With it there is no need of getting up to strike a light or turn on the bulb. All that is necessary is to touch a button and the time is flashed on the wall, after the same fashion that signs are flashed on the sidewalk. When the owner of the clock retires he turns a night dial to the ceiling and when he presses a bulb the electric light reflects from the dial through the lens and appears, giving the correct time in shadow on the ceiling.

Stevenson's Worthy Prayer.

The day returns and brings us the petty round of irritating concerns and duties. Help us to play the man, help us to perform them with laughter and kind faces; let cheerfulness abound with industry. Give us to go blithely on our business all this day, bring us to our resting beds weary and content and undishonored, and grant us in the end the gift of sleep. Amen.—Robert Louis Stevenson.

PICKED UP IN THE ORCHARD

Interesting Little Notes that Will Prove of Advantage When Making Permanent Plans.

When planning an orchard we must remember that it is a permanent investment and no pains in the preparation of the land or reasonable expense of the purchase of good trees, should be spared.

Never buy trees from a traveling salesman unless he produces credentials from a nursery that you know is all right. No matter how beautiful the pictures in his catalogue may be nor how glib his tongue, stick to the nurseries of known character, particularly those that advertise in high class farm and fruit papers. Publishers of such papers do not accept the advertisements of fakirs if they know it.

If your orchard is exposed to high winds plant a windbreak of evergreens, but wait until spring to do it.

A windbreak should never be set closer than 30 feet from the first row of trees, but they should be set close enough together to form a perfect protection. We do not believe in the theory that some people advance that trees need to be exposed to all kinds of weather and that windbreaks are unnecessary. It is like hardening a child by exposing him to cold and inclement weather without being properly dressed.

Every mother should keep a good liniment in the house to relieve the every day aches and pains of the children. Hamlins Wizard Oil is the world's best pain remedy.

The Beekeepers' association which met recently in Chicago, adopted a resolution in which the production of apples, peaches and other fruits is subordinated to the production of honey. The resolution demanded that congress enact a law prohibiting the spraying of trees while in bloom. The beekeepers say the use of poisonous substances in spraying the trees kills the bees.

Widowed on Wedding Day.

To have been bachelor, married man and widower all in the space of twelve hours was the unique but tragic experience of a young man in Belfast, Ireland, recently. Married in Christ church at noon, the bridegroom at midnight became a widower, for at that hour the bride died of an acute attack of appendicitis.

Deeply Rooted Ideas.

It is true that a woman suggests beef tea as a universal panacea for all ills. It is certain, on the other hand, that a man always believes that a woman always feels better for lying down.—S. Macnaughton.

White Ants Live High.

A species of white ants, called termites, is noted for its high hills or dwellings. If the houses of men were proportionately high, size for size, the humblest cottage would be a mile in height.

Tonic— Alterative

What is a "tonic"? A medicine that increases the strength or the tone of the whole system. What is an "alterative"? A medicine that alters or changes unhealthy action to healthy action. Name the best "tonic and alterative"? Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the only Sarsaparilla entirely free from alcohol. Ask your doctor about it.

Bilious attacks, sick-headaches, indigestion, constipation, dizzy spells—these are some of the results of an inactive liver. Ask your doctor if he endorses Ayer's Pills in these cases. The dose is small, one pill at bedtime.

Such a Dunce of a Cook.

Philander C. Knox, secretary of state, is a particular man about the food he eats. In fact, if the dishes do not suit him exactly his appetite fades away to nothing. One day in New York, being in a hurry, he rushed into a cheap restaurant and ordered roast beef. To his intense disgust he found that the beef was not good and immediately proceeded to enunciate a well-developed roar.

To the proprietor, who hurried up, Mr. Knox exclaimed:

"What do you mean by serving spoiled beef?"

"It's that bone-headed cook of mine," said the priprietor. "I told him to cut off that spoiled part before he served the beef!"

Whereupon Mr. Knox lost his appetite for a week.—Popular Magazine.

Made in Presence of Customer.

An enterprising Chicago dairyman has recently added to his list of electricity-driven appliance a one and one-half horsepower motor for driving a churn. His patrons buy cream of him, and for a small charge have it made into butter on the spot. The method is not only an excellent advertisement for the tradesman, but is also instructive for the children and others in the neighborhood.

Mothers will find Mrs. Winslow's Soothing Syrup the best remedy to use for their children during the teething period.

Substitute for Rubber.

One of the many proposed substitutes for rubber is obtained from the soya or Manchurian bean, and is being sembles the kidney bean, and is being introduced from Japan and the East Indies into other countries. NO APOLOGY

We have no apology to make to our friends and patrons for the condition of our print shop or stationery department. We carry staple job stock on hand at all times and can on very short notice turn out an A1 job from slips to legal blanks. We have just received a quantity of staple stationery and will endeavor to carry everything in that line to supply the wants of the most exacting. Let us know your particular fancy in this line and if we do not carry it we will get it at once. We are here to please and we know we can do it. We are not going out of business but have come to stay.

We are reminded by the great quantity of water that has fallen during the last few days what a great blessing it has been and how that portion that has been wasted could be utilized in the way of fire protection. This town is large enough and its citizens are progressive enough that our fire protection should be made more efficient. When one realizes that a fire started on either side of Campbell Avenue, in the business section, could hardly be checked with the present equipment, he can readily see that with a small outlay and a volunteer fire company, fire could be readily controlled. Add your influence to the cause and boost for a volunteer company.

Improvement Club to Advertise Campbell

The Improvement Club held its regular meeting in the Library building Friday evening, April 5.

F. S. Newcomb reported that he had put up a sign at the corner of Hicks and Hamilton avenues, giving the distance to Campbell from that point, two and one-half miles.

E. G. Lanz reported that the park needed attention and suggested that the grass and weeds be cut down and the ground plowed. The club ordered the work to be done.

W. S. Shelly, of the Committee on Advertising read a report on the matter of the folder advertising the attractions of Campbell. He stated that Campbell industries and special features concerning the town would be written up by local residents qualified to handle the subject. Mr. Shelly's report was favorably received and he was instructed by the club to perfect his plans for the folder.

S. G. Rodeck reported on sidewalk improvements and stated that there would be further improvements along this line.

R. K. Thomas reported that there was reason to believe that Campbell avenue might be macadamized in the near future.

It was ordered that the Committee on Public Improvements endeavor to secure the co-operation of the business men of the town in an effort to improve the appearance of the sidewalks by keeping them clear of merchandise.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Smith and Dr. W. I. Merrill were made members of the club.

Came to California With the Pioneers

Mr. C. C. Brady, who celebrated his 83rd birthday recently, came to California in 1849. His father, brother and himself left Hannibal, Missouri, in the early part of May, 1849. They left with a four horse team in company with some other emigrants, seven men in all. There were no white settlements along the route at this time, Fort Laramie, occupied by U. S. soldiers, being the only place at which they saw white people.

Cholera broke out among the emigrants and many deaths occurred along the route. They came a middle route by way of the Humboldt river and Truckee river, crossing the Sierra mountains near where the Southern Pacific railroad now crosses, in Nevada county.

Their first mining was done on the Yuba river and from there they went to the present site of Nevada City. While here their provisions gave out. They succeeded in buying a little flour from a miner for three dollars per pound. They left there and went to Sacramento with the intention of wintering there, but the American river rose and backed the Sacramento river up into the town. The water was from five to eight feet deep in the streets. Boats were running over town and out to dry land and they went out to Sutters Fort, built upon higher ground. There they fell in with six other refugees who were from Monroe County, Mo., and together with these men went up into Eldorado County.

In outfitting they bought five hundred pounds of flour at fifty cents a pound and a barrel of pork at $200. To avoid the scurvy they had to eat something besides bread and pork, so one of the boys went to Coloma and got two quarts of pickles at a dollar a quart and a half dozed bottles of molasses at a dollar a bottle. Potatoes were worth $2 per pound and Mr. Brady says they didn't pare them.

In 1852 Mr. Brady was appointed postmaster at Greenwood, Eldorado Co., where he remained until March, 1854.

Mr. Brady and his wife came to Campbell in 1911 and expect to make this their home for their remaining days.

FIRE PREVENTION DAY

Governor Hiram Johnson recently issued a "Fire Prevention Day" proclamation, setting aside a day for cleaning up. Campbell should fall in line and clean off the grass and weeds along the streets. A general cleanup would make the town look much more attractive if nothing more. Following is the proclamation:

"It is a matter of common knowledge that during each year an enormous amount of property is destroyed by fire with a consequent loss of many millions of dollars. In many instances this great fire waste is occasioned by carelessness, the lack of cleanliness, the accumulation of rubbish in yards, cellars, alleyways and unfrequented streets.

"In many states of the Union a day in each year is set apart by the chief executive as a fire prevention day and efforts are then made to remove these causes of conflagration.

"In order therefore that the attention of the people of this state shall be directed to these conditions and that they may, by proper action, lessen in material degree local fire destruction and waste, I, as Governor of the State of California do hereby proclaim Thursday, April 18, 1912, as 'Fire Protection Day' for the State of California."

HIRAM W. JOHNSON, Governor.

Hurlbert Elected School Trustee

Elgin C. Hurlbert was elected by a big majority to the Board of High School Trustees. Mr. Hurlbert will take W. B. Filcher's seat, the incumbent's term expiring July 1. Out of 672 votes cast Mr. Hurlbert received 474 votes. The male voter was in the minority, nearly every registered woman going to the polls.—Pacific Grove Argus.

The Demonstration Train

A large audience of interested spectators visited the demonstration train Tuesday morning at the S. P. depot. The school children held the floor from 9 to 10 o'clock, after which the growers gathered what information they wanted. The cars were crowded during the two hours and a half stay at this point and all visitors remarked on the benefits gained by this method of schooling the farmer.

Deafness Cannot be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustichian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflamation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrah, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.
